As we face increasingly complex challenges, this training invites you to return to the profound intelligence that resides in both nature and our own beings. Our comprehensive training provides a container for you to remember and strengthen your innate capacity to facilitate healing, while deepening your relationship with the regenerative patterns of the natural world.

With six live virtual modules concluding in an immersive in-person weekend led by our expert teachers, Dr. Tamisha Ponder and Shawn Moore, you'll gain proficiency in energy and sound healing, nature-based practices, and transformative leadership. Additional topics cover group facilitation, session design, and creating trauma-sensitive spaces that foster both individual and collective healing.

As you progress through the training, you will cultivate a deeper understanding of your own practice while developing the leadership presence to guide powerful healing experiences. This certification bridges time-honored techniques with trauma-sensitive frameworks for creating safe, regenerative spaces of transformation.

WHO IS THIS TRAINING FOR?

Ideal candidates have completed foundational training and certification in yoga, meditation, energy healing, or body work and are ready to extend their offerings with intentional, therapeutic practices. This training serves those who want to lead communities through regenerative-centered practices, with a focus on collective healing and resilience.

Participants should embody a strong personal practice in mindfulness or stillness, as it forms the essential base for guiding others in these practices. Our program is not an immersion or workshop; rather, a training course for those with the intention to complete all requirements for certification.

COURSE SCHEDULE & DATES

The training course is taught in six live virtual sessions, with a required in-studio closing weekend. LEARNING ENGAGEMENT & EXPECTATION

Our virtual learning experience requires full presence and dedication to ensure the most transformative outcomes for all participants. The following guidelines support an optimal learning environment:

Virtual Session Requirements

- Students must log in from a stable, quiet environment with reliable internet connection
- Cameras must remain on throughout all virtual sessions to maintain energetic connection and group cohesion
- Students should set up in a space that allows for movement and practice during sessions
- Technical requirements should be tested before each session (microphone, camera, internet)
- Login 5-10 minutes early to ensure proper setup and connection

Practice & Study Commitment

Expect to dedicate 3-5 hours per week outside of live sessions for:

- Reading assignments and written reflection
- Personal energy and sound healing practice
- Session preparation and practice teaching
- Homework completion and documentation

To support optimal learning and practice, students must create a dedicated practice space free from distractions where they can fully engage in the training. Students are expected to have all required materials readily available for each session and maintain strict confidentiality regarding personal shares and experiences within the group. Active engagement in discussions and practices is essential, as is completing all pre-session assignments to ensure full participation in group learning. This focused and prepared approach creates the foundation for deep learning and authentic practice development.

Your full engagement in both the virtual and practice components of this training is essential for developing the skills and understanding needed to become an effective energy and sound healing practitioner. This commitment supports not only your personal growth but contributes to the collective learning experience of the entire cohort.
